“We at ISO have more responsibility than ever before to liaison with the government agencies and become the voice of the professionals. Being so close to the ground and responsible for the patients journey, we are best suited to bring in the perspective to guide this complex path. We also need to collaborate with international associations, and be part of the large international community. This will work as catalyst for education and research." …”

Dear friends

It is with great pleasure and excitement that I welcome you all to the first e-newsletter of the Indian Society of Oncology in 2018. This newsletter is the first of many that will be e-published with news of the ISO, the conferences that we will be organizing and the conference’s/CME’s we will be associating with as partners. This will also include articles, case reports or any information related to Oncology in the public realm that any of the members wish to share with the membership of the ISO. We hope to create a calendar of future events in Oncology to be held in India or abroad that will enable more members to participate as delegates or present their work which will be showcased here.

The new committee of the ISO takes its responsibility very squarely and wishes its new and old members a very happy new year and hope that all participate in all the activities of the society be it the newsletter, conferences website or even just suggestions on how to improve the overall experience of being a member of this august society.
